CHARACTER
Old Testament People: Encounters with God

Explanation and Overview

Why Study Character?
The pages of the Old Testament are full of amazing stories about remarkable people. But the Old Testament is about so much more than those people; it is about God. From the very beginning, God has been at work in people’s lives, whether kings, prophets, judges, or ordinary individuals. By looking at how God worked in these people’s lives, we see God’s character, His redemptive plan for humanity, His love and provision, and His judgment and discipline.

What Will We Study in Character?
Character looks at how God interacts with humanity by examining the stories of many of the major players in the Old Testament. Some of the lessons include:

- The key life events of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and Joseph,
- The leadership shown by Moses and Joshua as they guided the Israelites,
- The reigns of Saul, David, and Solomon,
- The ministry and messages of the prophets Elijah, Elisha, Hosea, Isaiah, Jonah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel.

Students will become familiar with the story of the nation of Israel, God’s chosen people. Through observing Israel’s tumultuous history, students will learn about God’s favor, His call to obedience, His discipline, and His ultimate grace and forgiveness.

How Will We Study Character?
Your students will be exposed to the remarkable story of the Old Testament in a variety of ways. As you journey throughout the year, your students will be challenged to learn with their heads, their hearts, and their hands.

Your students will constantly be challenged to learn about the Old Testament with their head—to learn what they need to know about God and how He relates to people. This type of learning is all about a basic understanding of the truths of Scripture. But students will be challenged to go beyond simple understanding, moving to application of what they have learned. Some of the Learning Goals from actual lessons demonstrate this head knowledge of the Old Testament:

- Students will understand God’s purpose for calling Moses.
- Students will understand the promises God gave Abraham and Abraham’s faith response.
- Students will understand God’s covenant with David and its fulfillment by Jesus.

Your students will also be challenged to learn about Jesus with their heart—to allow God to transform their feelings as they look at His Word. What your students know about God’s interaction with the people in the Old Testament should affect them emotionally, not just mentally; they should learn to value the things of God. Here are some examples of heart learning taken from Learning Goals of actual lessons:

- Students will respond in faith to God’s promises.
- Students will genuinely worship and thank God for His promised blessings in their life.
- Students will express their feelings toward God as the true source of their abilities.
Occasionally, your students will be challenged to learn with their hands—to learn what they should be able to do as a result of their Old Testament study. Students will be able to apply a specific skill or discipline after studying God’s interactions with His people. Examples of hands learning from actual lessons include:

- Students will act in faith in difficult circumstances, knowing that God is with them at all times.
- Students will take a stand for Christ even in the face of opposition.
- Students will have a more meaningful prayer life as a result of the lives they have studied.

Preparing to Teach

Read

Ideally, you should have a working knowledge of the Old Testament before teaching this course. If you are attempting to bone up on the Old Testament for the first time, the majority of the lessons in Character come from the books of Genesis, 1 Samuel, 1 Kings, and 2 Kings. Reading these four books before you begin teaching would be beneficial. If you want to read these books in a month, you might consider pacing yourself by reading Genesis 1–32 the first week, Genesis 33–50 and Samuel 1–14 the second week, 1 Samuel 15–31 and 1 Kings 1–15 the third week, and 1 Kings 16–2 Kings 25 the fourth week.

Since most people are not as familiar with the Old Testament as they are with the New, you may have forgotten many details. In preparing to teach Character, you may discover truths you never knew. Marvel in these new discoveries and realize that the Bible still has much to teach you.

In addition to the Bible, some suggested sources for further reading and preparation include:

As you study for each session, concentrate on the lives of the Old Testament characters: their backgrounds, their actions, and the settings for their stories. In addition, explore the kinds of questions students may have as you lead them through this study of how God used ordinary people in the Old Covenant.

Pray

As you prepare, here are some specific things to pray about:

- Ask God to open your eyes to the way He worked in the lives of people in the Old Testament.
- Pray that God would show you what He wants you to learn as you prepare to teach and lead students.
- Pray that the Holy Spirit would open the hearts and minds of the students you teach.
- Pray that you and your students will be able to apply this study to your lives.
